

He Toki Sponsors Programme

The He Toki Sponsors Programme (HTSP) is a new pilot programme designed to connect industry employers with our trade training students over the duration of their training at Ara Trades campus.

HTSP serves to boost student confidence, to motivate them to successfully complete their trades qualifications, and to create sustainable futures into the building and construction industry.

How does it work?

- We match suitable trainees with sponsors through a rigorous selection and screening process.
- Sponsors choose from a range of sponsorship activities that provides value to their organisation and the trainee.
- Sponsors are provided with regular progress reports to monitor student performance.

HE TOKI TRADE TRAINING

He Toki supports over 200 Maori trainees each year to undertake qualifications in trade training and health related courses. The programme covers student tuition fees and provides a learner support fund to support their learning journey, along with dedicated support staff and services on campus.

HTSP provides an additional layer of support to prepare students for their transition into employment and apprenticeships.

IN-KIND SPONSORSHIP

Sponsoring company's provide goods or services that can add value both to the company and the student.

- Company branded merchandise such as hi-viz tops and PPE.
- Tool incentives for course block completions and high class attendance.
- Industry mentoring
- Construction site visits
- Work experience opportunities

The ultimate goal is to successfully transition into fulltime employment and apprenticeships.
